The Virtual Museum of Canada: Community Memories

A case study presented by Kati Geber

Thursday November 21, 2002 at Nortel Skyline

What?

Community Memories exhibits form a unique on-line portrait of Canada's history, explore subjects as varied as a town's main industry, an historical event or a way of life, and draw from both an institution's permanent collection and the personal photographs, documents and oral reminiscences of local citizens.

This presentation aims to develop a detailed understanding of the issues concerning putting design theories into practice, the realities of content, architecture, visual decisions, and ways the design may determine engagement and persuasion factors for the creation of new horizons for information, communication and learning
